"BLIND LOVE."

Begin with the beginning. Remember that this story will be published EX-CLUSIVELY in America in the NEW YORK SUNDAY WORLD.

THE ROBBERS OF THE PEOPLE.

Since the organization of the Sugar Trust the retail price of sugar-a necessity of the people-has been raised 40 per cent.

The estimated profit of the Sugar Trust for the first five months of this year is $5,330.

What evidence, what rhetoric, what denunciation could be more damning than these figures ? Is there no limit to the patience of the plundered people?

A highwayman is sent behind the bars for stealing a few dollars from an individual.

The Sugar Trust manipulators are pilfering the whole public of millions upon millions.

Their scheme is, to all intents and purposes, a gigantic robbery of the people, in defiance of the anti-conspiracy principles of the common law.

Who will bring these big sugar thieves to justice?

THE CHILDREN'S CHARITY.

A very pleasing feature of the Free Doctors' Fund for the sick babies of the tenements is the widespread interest taken in it by the children of the metropolis. More than onehalf of the total number of contributors thus far have been boys and girls.

Nothing could be more appropriate than that the children of the well-to-do should thus reach out the hand of charity to succor and relieve the suffering children of the

We hope the children of the metropolis will keep on in their good work. Every dollar and every dime will help extend the circle of this eminently practical and benefisent charity. The sweltering days of midsummer are close at hand, and the fund should boom from this time on,

Let the children help the children.

When the Sugar Trust was formed in October, 1887, therk were loud cries made against it. because it proposed to advance the price of sugars about a half cent a pound. But despite the storm of popular indignation, prices were raised, and they have been going up higher and higher ever since. In the early Fall of 1887, before the Trust was organized, the average retail price of granulated sugar was about 7 cents a pound. Now it ranges all the way from 914 cents to 10 cents, a majority of retailers charging the latter price.

This unheard of advance is due not only to the machinations of the Trust, but to the action of the wholesale grocers as well.

The representatives of the large wholesale houses met last Spring and concluded to charge a quarter of a cent additional over the refiner's prices for "handling," as they put it, they having declared that they were handling that staple at a loss.

"Why, it's downright robbery," said a retail grocer, who keeps himself well-informed of the doings of the Trust. "Here they are, piling up millions upon millions, and yet they keep right on putting the price up higher all the time.

"Take the statement in the weekly circular, for instance. It shows that in the first five months of this year the Sugar Trust made a total net profit of $8,230,000.

"Five dividends amounting to 19 per cent, were paid on Trust certificates in 1888, and thus far in 1892 a dividend of 2½ per cent. has been paid, with an extra stock dividend of 8 per cent.

"Trust certificates have become a favorite way to invest one's money because of the houses met last Spring and concluded to Trust certificates have become a favorite

"Trust certificates have become a favorite way to invest one's money because of the immense profit they yield.

"Of course people who invest their money this way don't care how the immense profits are gained; they do not stop to think that it is obtained by taking the bread from the mouths of the poor, or if they do they haven't got the heart to care."

The figures given by the retailers are correct. From $110, the quotation for certificates in March, the quotation has jumped to $120, and conservative speculators admit that they would not be surprised if they went to $150 before the year is out.

These figures are merely given to show how

These figures are merely given to show how heartless millionaires can combine and grasp the money of the poor people in defiance of raw material, and not due in any way to a conspiracy to raise prices.

Of course the members of the Trust have an excuse for raising prices. They say that the advance in refined sugar is entirely due to the unprecedented advance in the price of raw material, and not due in any way to a all laws.

It is known, however, that the Trust refineries have held a vast amount of raw sugar for a long while.

Before the boom started the managers of the Trust saw what was coming, and they bought up all the raw material that they could lay their hands on.

"Suppose they did hold a lot of raw material?" said a sugar broker, this morning; "they had the foresight to see what was coming, and merely protected themselves by buying in large lots. They are entitled to all they make, as it shows their business shrewdness."

ness."

The man with a large family to support who is working for $1.50 or $2 a day, however, will doubtless disagree with the broker's ideas. A far estimate of the financial standing of the Sugar Trust is made in the Statistical, weekly circular devoted to the sugar trade, in its latest issue. It says :

The names of the separate companies comprising the "Trust," and the capital stock is known by the evidence taken before the State Investigating Committee and from other sources.

This capital is limited to about $50,000,000.

This entire amount was not paid to the stock-holders of the refineries taken into the "Trust, but an amount remained in the treasury, 8 per cent, of which was given to certificate holders in April, and a small amount yet remains to be disa small amount yet remains to be dis-

The total value of these "Trust" refineries, with the improvements added aince the Trust took possession, and independent of their carning value, should be at least $20,000,000.

From the business of the year 1886 the "Trust" have a surplus of nearly $10,000,000 cash, after payment of dividends, and from the business of 1889 to the present time they should have when liquidated, $15,000,000 net cash profit—say a total of $25,000,000 cash surplus, which, added to $25,000,000 money value of plants, gives a total of $43,000,000 money value of plants, gives a total of $43,000,000 money value of plants, gives a total of $43,000,000 money value of plants, gives a total of $20,000,000 money value of plants, gives a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives there a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives a total of $20,000,000 money value of year varied gives a total of $20,000 money value of year varied gives a total of $20,000 money value of year varied gives a total of $20,000 money va

A moderate estimate of profits for remainder of rear would give them a total of $50,000,000,000,000 per certificate, even if the Trust should be liquidated at that time, which is not a supposable case. Years may probably elapse hetore their business can be seriously interrupted, if ever.

The "Trust" does not seem to be in the least alarmed by the recent set-back it received by the order of the Supreme Court revoking the charter of the North River Sugar Refining Company.

Sugar's Cost Again Raised by the Mighty Inspector Byrnes Tells Rellie Bly Some Remarkable Things.

Every Crime.

And that She's "the Finest Tag that Can Be Put on a Criminal's Shoulders."

There are very few persons in the world who haven't imagined they were especially fitted to fill one of three positions. If they did not want to be actors they longed to be writers, and if they did not want to be writers they hungered to be detectives. Do you not know among your acquaintances several who are positive they possess great dramatic ability, which the world would recognize if they could only secure an opening? And don't you know several more who are positive they would startle the literary world by their genius it editors were not so mean and would only print their productions? And haven't you other acquaintances who could have solved the Whitechapel mystery and cleared up the Cronin case in twenty-four hours if they had only the chance?

I have known many such persons, and I think the less chance for an opening they get the greater happiness they have. I know one woman. short, fat, ugly, black, forty-five and gray who imagines herself a second Charlotte Cush man. Every Summer she inserts an advertisement in the newspapers to the effect that " a beautiful, prepossessing young star, of great dramatic ability, wants a manager with $5,000; can make $20,000 in six months." And there is another woman who never reads of anything. rom a bank robbery or murder down to a lost pug dog, who does not think she could solve the mystery if some one would only recommend her to some detective bureau.

I decided to consult Inspector Byrnes, who has any one else in New York, as to what chance there is on his force for women.

"Tell me," I said, "have you many applications from women who wish to become detec-"I average two or three a week, "he said, as he rested his elbow on the desk and toyed with a penholder. "How do I get them? In person and by letter. The strangest part of it is that not one woman out of fifty is a New Yorker." What class of women are they?" "That I cannot say positively. There are two classes to which they do not belong-the very rich and the bad. They are always dressed well and seem educated. I think they are mostly women who live at some distance from New York. and who have nothing to do but read fictitious stories in which some wonderful female detec-tive figures or police stories of some capture. and they dream over them until they become possessed with the idea that they are cumping and they want a chance to show it. "Do they expect to make money by it?"

"I don't think they do. They offer to work or nothing or anything, if I will only give them a trial. They all think they have the natural intuition and ability to accomplish a great

WOMEN CANNOT KEEP SECRETS.

'Do you ever give any of them any work?" "I never do. I never want to offend the ladies, of course," said the Inspector, as he idly twirled my parasol like a top, "so when they urge me to give them 'just one trial, now do,' always say there are reasons why I cannot. That's all you have to do, just touch a woman's curious chord and you get no peace until she is satisfied on that score. Women can't keep a secret. There was a clever woman in here the other day-a well-dressed, handsome womanand she said, 'Now, Inspector, why won't you employ a woman?' 'Because,' I told her, 'no woman with a husband or sweetheart can keep a secret.' 'Then I am just the one you want, she said, springing to her feet; 'my busband is dead and my heart is in the grave," and the Inspector laughed heartily at the recollection.

'But that is true." he continued gravely: no woman can keep a secret. If she has a husband or sweetheart she wants to show how much she trusts him by sharing the secret. When I do employ a woman, if possible, I put her to work without telling her anything about the case, or if that is impossible, and she must be told. I always put some one on to shadow the woman while she is working. I never knew a woman I could trust in such affairs. We don't need women in this office. There never was a case in which it was positively necessary to have the aid of a woman, and yet we never have a case that a woman does not figure in and help us to a very large extent." "I don't understand," I said, as the Inspector watched to see the effect of his words.

"You know the old saying that in every case there is a woman at the bottom of it? Well, if a woman isn't at the bottom of it she is always in it. The first thing we do when we want to find a criminal is to find the woman. We search out his wife or sweetheart and devote our attention to her. They are the finest tag that can be on a criminal's shoulders. Unknowingly they give us all the pointers for our work. There isn't a man who gets into trouble but has some woman he loves, and if he makes his escape, sure enough the longing to communicate with the one he loves is a thing he cannot conquer. In some way he sends her a message, and then we have him. If she's his wife she will stick to him till death and sacrifice everything to aid him. But her devotion only brings him nearer to the clutches of the law, for we know every move she makes. If she is his sweetheart she has tenderness enough in her to remember how he has cared for her and offers him the consolation he seeks, so in either case the woman unknowingly helps us capture our man.

BETBAYING THEIR LOYERS. "A woman is a mill-stone around a thief's neck," said the Inspector. "Why? Because he

I heard her story and sent her back to her old mother in the years to live that you might as well spend them in jail," added the Inspector. The man assented. "Don't steal, because I am on your country. Well, the neighbors were very un-charitable, she teld me afterwards, and her mother died of a broken heart, and there was nothing left for the girl to do but to drift back to New York, and into her old life. SVER SUCCESSFUL AS DETECTIVES. "A truthful, self-respecting woman can never make a detective," said the Inspector "Detectives are called upon to do disreputable things which a refined woman could never do. I never knew, as I told you, a woman who was a successful detective. They may be of benefit in society cases -- which are run by small private concerns-but then only to destroy a man's or woman's domestic happiness. "What class of women do you think belong to detective agencies?"

"Well, now," he said, "I think it would be very difficult for a woman to be a good woman and be a professional detective. No good woman will pry into the domestic secrets of others to betray them. I think good women have a gentle, sweet honesty that would prevent them from doing such things. Some of these private agen-cies are blots on the city. They watch the newscapers and when they see any notices of articles lost or stolen or persons missing, they write to the persons advertising that by calling upon them they can give some information. When the interested persons call they are persuaded to employ the agents, who work, with no result, as long as the victims will pay. I have known of their sending anonymous letters to married people to arouse suspicion and jealousy of each other, and then slip into a payng position of watching the suspected one. had a woman complain to me once about her jealousy being worked upon till she employed man to watch her husband. She had no grievances against her husband-only her suspicions were aroused. I sent for the husband, and he confided in me a like story only that he had employed a woman to watch his wife. I got the

THE INSPECTOR'S BUSY LIKE. Inspector Byrnes has lived at 59 West Ninth treet since 1875. He has a pleasant wife and a lovely group of five daughters, bright, interesting and clever children. There is no son to bear the father's name. The Inspector will be forty-seven years old on June 15, but he looks much younger Some of the inspector's most interesting cases forced into a brisk run from 10.30 in the morning till 10.30 at night.

Rowell, in his record-making race, ran an complete thing of its kind ever published. It contained the photographs and history of most well-known criminals in America and has been the means of identifying many of them. After his publisher an effort was made to have a copy of "Professional Criminals of America" given to every American Consul. The Inspector says that American Consuls are frequently victimized by professional criminals, who happen to be away from this country. In some way the movement fell through. Besides this book Mr. Byrnes, in connection with Mr. Julian Hawthorne, has published five books, among which are "The Great Bank Robbery," "A Tragic Mystery," "The Ameri-can Penman" and "Another's Crime." The latest work, just published in serial form, is "Sergeant Von," a story of unique series of crimes committed in this country and Europe.

This is solely Inspector Byrnes's work.

"If one built a wall around New York," said the Inspector, when speaking about keeping trace of criminals. "one could know the city perfectly and be able to fight with what work came beneath one's nose, but if the search had to be made outside of the walls for an escaped criminal or an accomplice the searchers would be the worst jays one could well imagine. There take an interest in and work out mentally to see how, why and when the crime was committed. Thus I know what is going on, and if by any chance any part of the work should#fall on me I know immediately what to do, for I have studied the case until I know as much as if I had been working on the ground. People get the idea that detecting is an easy thing and that any one can do it; but in this, as in other walks in life, one must be able to conceive original ideas and be able to work them out. If they try to follow in the footsteeps of another they will fail just as sure as death. But it is, a great business and my heart is wrapped up in it, "conciuded the Inspector.

VERY LITTLE CHANCE FOR EX-CONVICTS. Probably no man of the same income gives more to charity than does Inspector Byrnes. I suppose most people would think it was not charity to give aid to criminals, but criminals are the ones who receive aid from Byrnes's pocketbook. Why does he give them money? To help keep them out of jail as long as possible. As he explained to me, after a thief has served his sentence he is cast out on a world that has no mercy for him. He is branded and no one will employ him. What is he to do? Steal, of course. So when Inspector Byrnes meets these men he

Charlie Bowell scored 349½ miles at the 60th hour, and 430 miles at the 72d hour. No race was ever run beyond this point, and interest centres in the novel nine-day contest. DENIS SHEA GETS THERE. Made Deputy Collector of Customs-Death-blows to Willis and Jacobus. Another Republican district leader has been landed in the person of Denis Shea, of the Second District, who has been appointed a Deputy Collector of Customs to succeed M. J. Gladke. Collector of Customs to succeed M. J. Gladke.

Addison B. Atkins, of the Brooklyn Eagle, has also been appointed a Deputy Collector, succeeding Deputy Collector Samuel Guthrie.
Atkins's appointment sounds the death-knell to the hopes of both Theodore B. Willis and Col.
John Wesley Jacobus, for appointment to succeed Burveyor Beattle, and confirms the statement that George W. Lyon, of the Twenty-first Assembly District, is to be appointed Surveyor of the Port.

Homeless Boys Come by Freight. Two half-grown boys were found sleeping in a wagon on Riverdale avenue early this morning by a mounted policeman. He took them to the Kingsbridge station, where they gave their names as Charles and Edward Spence, sixteen and fourteen years old. They said that they had come from Buffalo in a freight car. Their father and mather were dead, and they started out together to battle with the world.

The Children's Society will take charge of them.

Everybody who has Read "THE DEAD SECRET" will begin WILKIE COLLINS'S Latest Thrilling Romance, "BLIND LOVE," with the Opening Chapters in the SUNDAY WORLD.

SAVED FIVE HUMAN LIVES.

DOCK OFFICER JONES'S GOLDEN DEED ON THE SINKING CALIFORNIA.

Special Officer J. T. Jones, of the Rotterdam dock, is liquized to-day over in Jersey City for baving saved the lives of a woman and her four children. A group of men sat around Jones on the dock A group of men sat around Jones on the doca this morning listening to the story of the rescue and congratulating him on his heroic deed.

In the water near by was a canal-boat floating bottom side up. If it had not been for Jones the woman and children in that boat would have gone under when it was overturned.

But Jones was there, and instead of being dead this morning the mother and her little ones are alive and happy at Steup's Hotel on Exchange Place.

this morning the mother and her little ones are alive and happy at Steup's Hotel on Exchange Place.

The canal-hoat California was in the slip last night with a load of coal. Capt. Al Neilson was busy about the dock. Mrs. Neilson and the children were on the deck of the boat.

The steamship Obdam came up the slip at a lively rate. No signal was given to warn the people on the canal-baat of their danger.

The Obdam, towering like a monster above the small boat, bore rapidly down upon it. The sharp bow crushed into the side of the canal-boat and turned it nearly over. Mrs. Neilson screamed. She could bardly stand on the sloping deck of the boat. The children clung to hef skirts and screamed with fright.

Jones saw their danger and sprang onto the boat. He tossed the children like so many balls to men on another canal-boat. He had to work lively for the boat was going down. Jones sprang off with Mrs. Nellson just as the canal-boat gave a jurch and turned over.

There was an affecting scene between Capt. Neilson and his family on the dock. He grasped the hand of the man who had saved the lives of those most dear to him, but he was too much overcome to express the gratitude he felt.

The California is a new boat and is owned by Berman & Whyte, of 55 Broadway. It was loaded with about six hundred and fifty tons of coal. The canal-boat Amazon, loaded with 350 barrels of cement, was sunk.
